

Mirror, Mirror Monologue Options

MAGIC MIRROR: I'm sorry, your majesty. How can I be of service to you, my queen, conqueror of the Seven Realms, supreme sorceress of the Order of Magic, and ruler over all people, including those who call you the Conjurer of Terror and the Mistress of Malevolence and Mayhem, the dwarves who call you Magora the Mighty Mage, the witches who call you Gothmora the Great, the fairies who call you the Harbinger of Harm, and the giants of the Sky Kingdom who likely call you by many names that nobody knows because no one has ever met the giants?

EVIL QUEEN: Then I shall increase your powers. One sec... Where is it now? Aha! Here it is. Once I place this new enchantment upon you, Mirror, you will be able to let me see into all of the mirrors throughout the kingdom! That should do the trick!

RAPUNZEL: Mother says it's for the best. And, oh, she'd kill me if she knew I was talking to you right now and... are you real or just a dream?